St. Pet rsburg, July 13 -After several months of comparative quiet, there was a deaccustration of workingmen in the Russian capital today. Early this morning a crowd consisting of several hundred workingmen and their sympathizers met in the Newsky Prospect, and at five o'clock started to march toward the Winter Palace, carrying red flaga and singing revolutionary songs. The police shortly after the line began to move ordered the marchers to disperse. The workingmen refused to obey the orders, however, and the police then charged the crowd. When order had been restored, it was found that two workingmen had been killed, and many nad been injured. The remainder of
